

I feel that cross ownership of newspapers and other media outlets will create a monopoly of tragic proportions because it would eliminate virtually all competition. Small market stations or papers would lose money and be forced to sell out to the larger companies, therefore giving the consumers less choices of programming and print media. Having few owners own all of the outlets really narrows the scope of what the public views and reads, and this is bad because we are a free and democratic country.